

Military and Civilian Health Partnership Awards 2009 Launch

The Military and Civilian Health Partnership Awards 2009 were launched on 14 May by Scotland's Minister for Public Health and Sport Shona Robison and the UK Defence Secretary John Hutton.

The awards recognise the people, projects and initiatives from the Defence Medical Services, NHS, private and voluntary sectors that provide our serving and former military personnel with the very best healthcare and health service. So if you are involved in the delivery of healthcare and health services to the Armed Forces (including the Reserves), their dependants or Service veterans, or know someone who does, now is the time to recognise them.

Closing date for nominations is 26 June 2009.

For further information visit the awards website at:
www.militarycivilianhealthawards.org.